

CQG CREATIVE

Cindy has been listening, crafting and sharing stories through media production for 30 years. She has experience in every aspect of media production including script writing, producing, directing and editing. Her organizational and leadership skills show in her ability to bring imaginative and innovative players to the table and lead the team in the creative process.

A small bit part in a Metropolitan Life Insurance commercial when Cindy was 12 years old gave her the spark to pursue a career in marketing and video production. She attended the University of North Texas and received a BA in Radio/TV/Film. She served at The Salvation Army's International Video Production Department in Dallas first as a college intern and ending as the Assistant Director of the Department. After 22 years with the Army's OMM Productions, she and a business partner bought "OMM" from The Salvation Army in 2006. In 2012 she opened her own company, CQG Creative.

Over the years, her favorite projects have been traveling to over 18 countries producing third world and developing world documentaries, interviewing countless drug & alcohol addicts in recovery and producing the 911 disaster relief documentary for The Salvation Army, which won the prestigious Silver Telly Award and Women in Communications Clarion Award.

Cindy has won numerous industry awards. She loves the creative process, especially writing, and considers herself a storyteller. She has been married for 25 years to her college sweetheart and videographer husband, David. Together they have two four-legged children: Azul and Ruby.
